Some newly minted alums share their post-graduation plans as they head into the wild blue yonder. —compiled by Gayne Kalustian '17 and Jessica Fedin '17

"I'll be working at Walter Reed in D.C. doing clinical research on prosthetics for amputees—as well as on PTSD and phantom limb pain."

—Kelly Bach
neuroscience

"I'll be working in D.C. at a consulting company called Applied Predictive Technologies."

—Spencer Chu
engineering sciences

"I'll be in Singapore working with the World Toilet Organization to address the international sanitation crisis."

—Anna Ghnouly
geography and Asian and Middle Eastern studies

"I'm going to grad school in Beijing with the Schwarzman scholars program."

—Jordyn Turner
Asian and Middle Eastern studies

"I'm doing a post-baccalaureate year to prepare to apply to medical school."

—Alex Ganninger
English

"I'll be in New York City working as an institutional wealth analyst at Goldman Sachs."

—Sophie Hoffman
psychology and economics

"I'll be doing education consulting in Dubai."

—Dari Seo Seo government

"I hope to play in the NFL. I've been signed by the Kansas City Chiefs."

—Vernon Harris
electrical engineering
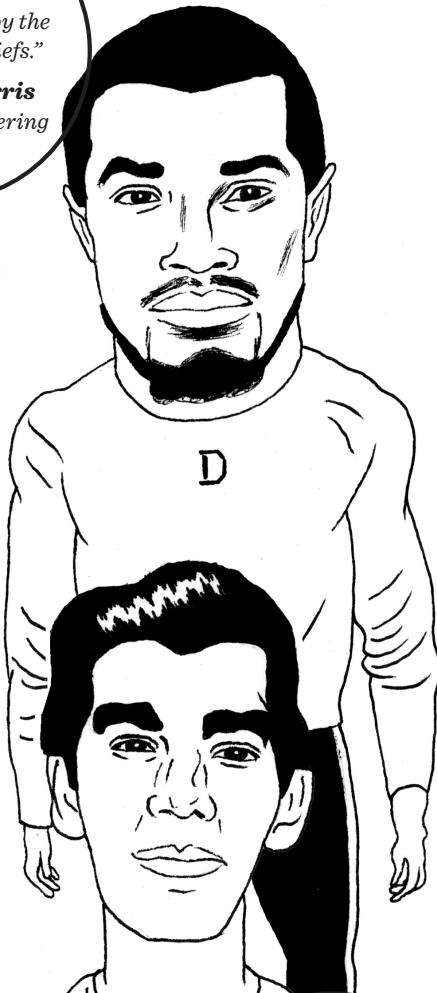

"I'm going to Stanford medical school."

—Sharjeel Syed
biology

"I'll be going to Columbia Law School."

—Kasia Robak
Spanish and government

"I'll be serving in the Israel Defense Forces."

—Jordan Kastrinsky
linguistics modified with film and media studies, and Asian and Middle Eastern studies

illustration by ANDY FRIEDMAN