

CHEWING THE FAT

Collis Café is more than a dining hall—it's a go-to spot for catching up with fellow students any time of the day.

COMPILED BY JESSICA FEDIN '17
DRAWN BY PETER ARKLE

A combination of things has made this term much better, like not being premed. I just have so much more energy.

I'm so jazzed about the fact that I'm eating real eggs for breakfast today.

Collis is for beautiful people.

When you see the 10 mozzarella sticks for $6 deal during the day, you know a lot of people were not having a fun night last night.

I feel really burned out today.

Collis Ben* is the Irish twin I never had.

Kathy* makes my day brighter every morning.

*COLLIS WORKERS

I love Collis when the lines are short. Sometimes I'll schedule 5:30 dinners.

Yesterday my study train got derailed by an INTERNET SQUIRREL!

Dave's smoky spice sauce is a must for stir fry.

Specials

The magic COLLIS SOUP FAIRY determines the three soups served for the day.

I hate that Collis is closed on Sundays. It really hurts the quality of my weekend meals.

The omelettes here are my favorite food at Dartmouth.

Is it me or does the line for stir fry just get longer every time I come here?

I'm not going to get a good grade on the final.

I just posted about it on Facebook, go check it out.

It's a little embarrassing, but I probably come here 16 times a day.

She's been holed up in the library all day working on her thesis.

Hey, I haven't seen you in a long time. We should grab a meal soon.

I need a class to balance out the two horrible ones, but then it would be a three-class term for the first time this year.

I don't know how I spent $22 at late night yesterday. It was a confusing time for all involved.

People are rude and leave messes.

I was trying to find meatballs in the marinara sauce and then realized the meatballs had their own pot.

